

TEXASHEARTBEAT.COM

CD REVIEW

“Songs of the Cherokee Cowboy”

Curtis Potter

Produced by Justin Trevino

Heart of Texas Records

In 2013, Curtis Potter released his album: “Songs of the Cherokee Cowboy,” a special tribute to Ray Price and his music. Curtis Potter, an artist who also keeps REAL Texas Country Music alive, sings eleven great Ray Price hit songs including “Danny Boy” “If She Could See Me Now,” “I Love You So Much It Hurts Me,” “Sittin and Thinkin,” “I Won’t Mention It Again” (a duet with Ken Garrett), “Walk Me To The Door,” “I’m Still Not Over You,” “It Should Be Easier Now,” “Soft Rain,” and the “Healing Hands of Time.”

The jewel of the project is “The Songs of The Cherokee Cowboy” in which the lyrics tell a story through Ray Price songs. Willie Nelson joins Curtis on the song, dazzling the essence of Texas Country music, contributing his compassion and respect to Ray Price. The album is produced by Justin Trevino, Curtis Potter “Songs of the Cherokee Cowboy” includes Jim Loessberg , Buddy Harmon and Bobby Jarzombek on drums, Randy Reinhard and Buddy Emmons on steel guitar, Ron Knuth, Bobby Flores, Johnny Gimble, Buddy Spicher and Reggie Rueffer on fiddle, Jake Hooker and Jim Kalson on bass, Charlie Walton, Pete Wade and Bobby Flores on guitar, T. Bonta, Pig Robbins and Randy Reinhard on piano, Justin Trevino on rhythm guitar and harmony vocals.